Carbohydrate protein interactions are the intermolecular and intramolecular interactions between protein and carbohydrate moieties. These interactions form the basis of specific recognition of carbohydrates by lectins. Carbohydrates are important biopolymers and have a variety of functions. Often carbohydrates serve a function as a recognition element. That is, they are specifically

Protein Carbohydrate Interactions Studied by NMR From

Carbohydrate spectra are, in comparison, more manageable and, currently, most of the NMR-based methods to study protein-carbohydrate interactions are fairly focused on the observation of carbohydrate resonances. Herein, we discuss representative methods and examples of both protein- and carbohydrate-detected NMR-based methods to scrutinize the factors that govern sugar-receptor interactions.

Carbohydrates Proteins and Fats Disorders of Nutrition

Carbohydrates, proteins, and fats supply 90% of the dry weight of the diet and 100% of its energy. All three provide energy (measured in calories), but the amount of energy in 1 gram (1/28 ounce) differs: 4 calories in a gram of carbohydrate or protein 9 calories in a gram of fat These nutrients

Protein and carbs get the balance right BBC Good Food

Protein and carbs both play a part in helping you shed extra pounds. Choose lean protein like chicken, turkey, fish and low-fat dairy - about the size of a deck of cards - and keep carb servings to the size of your clenched fist. Choose complex carbs, such as wholegrain versions of bread, pasta and rice, and include plenty of veg and fruit in your diet.

Have 1grm of carbohydrate per kg of body weight and about 30 grams of protein. Have a drink (e.g. a recovery drink or a pint of skimmed milk) and a banana immediately post-training (this provides about 10 grams of protein and 30 grams of carbohydrate) followed within about 45 minutes with more substantial food such as beans on toast and tuna.

Protein carbohydrate interactions an overview

Protein carbohydrate interactions are weak, typically in the millimolar to micromolar range, and many of the well-developed techniques for the study of ligand binding are inappropriate in this low-affinity domain. The saccharide ligands for many carbohydrate-binding proteins are scarce, and their availability is often limited by the elaborate and tedious synthetic protocols required for
